

The Bermuda Triangle

A long chain of famously unexplained disappearances at sea or in an aircraft over the area of water between Bermuda, Florida and Puerto Rico in the North Atlantic Ocean have over time lead to different conspiracy theories said to explain them. With a sense of mystery and sinister reputation for losing human life having built up at the Bermuda Triangle over time, people looked for a reason to explain this trend. This has come to various conflicting theories about the area such as paranormal or alien activity in the area, a result of popular belief in this in general. Other theories believe a giant crystal pyramid underwater is the cause, government-controlled military activity or that residual energy which once powered the Lost City of Atlantis is the cause. Officially accepted scientific explanations are believed by conspiracists to be insufficient explanations to the trend which has given way to the name, "The Devil's Triangle".
